RAISING THE BAR

Exquisitely crafted in walnut with scorched oak and brass detailing, the Orbis bar embodies innovation and precision craftsmanship at its best. Created by a small creative furniture workshop founded by designer maker Edward Johnson, Orbis is, to date, the most complex piece of furniture the team has ever made.

The top of the cabinet opens with the lightest of touch to reveal a luxurious bar with everything needed to mix favourite tipples. The central serving area is made using durable end grain walnut and has a beautiful ripple carved into the corner to hold lemons, limes, bar snacks or accessories. Around the serving area the bar has been engineered to store spirits along with a selection of glasses. The two doors on the front open effortlessly to reveal layers of curved shelves where vintage champagne and fine wines can be stored.

Pantry perfection

British kitchen design company, Humphrey Munson, has introduced a range of bespoke handmade kitchen pantries. As with all its cabinetry, each piece is handcrafted and finished to the highest standard in-house at the firm's workshop in Essex by a team of talented cabinetmakers.

Made from natural oak, the Breakfast Pantry is a bespoke design by Peter Humphrey, design director and founder of the company. A focal point in the kitchen, the central part contains the integrated column refrigerator and freezer. Either side is a pantry containing shelves, drawers, spice and condiment racks. The joy is that each pantry can be customised to the client's specification and, being a freestanding piece, it can also be dismantled and moved to another house should the need arise.

Turning the tables

Simon Orrell Designs is a long-established furniture designer creating custom-made pieces for interior designers and private clients. Specialising in materials such as shagreen, parchment, pua, violet oyster, hammer shell, gold and silver leaf, mother of pearl and cracked eggshell, he has carved out a niche for his distinctive finishes.

This year's launch of Simon Orrell Atelier means that a diffusion collection of stylish interior pieces is now available that uses the same luxury finishes as the custom-made furniture. The Sephera dressing table with its serpentine design in shagreen and bone is just one of many designs that recreates the glamour of Art Deco in a diffusion collection of interior pieces. It is also available in parchment and bone.
